Gannon, but when questioned by Mr. Osborne admitted he didn't know if the improvement was before the raid on the Webster Hotel or afterward.

The contention of the defense was that as soon as the petition was submitted to the Captain a decided change for the better resulted, but neither this witness nor Andrew Schaeffer, manager of the Union Square Hotel, who immediately followed, established the fact. Several policemen were examined as to the steps taken to "clean up" the precinct and the trial was adjourned until 3 o'clock to-morrow afternoon.
